ost of the earth has been discovered. More and more we are probing the secrets of the air. But the ocean remains, in many ways, the great mystery. And since nearly three-fourths of the earth's surface is covered by oceans, it will probably be many years before scientists can explain all of the wonders of the deep.

One of the never-ceasing sources of wonder is the quantity of food which comes out of the sea, and the nutritive value of this sea food. Science explains this, in part, by telling us that as the land becomes poorer, the sea becomes richer. By the processes of erosion and other factors, the land being continually impoverished and the sea enriched. Water which seeps through the soil dissolves soluble salts and minerals and these eventually reach the seas. Man has even hastened this process by deforestation, and the seas have become a great storehouse.

After installation of the officers was completed, Mrs. R. S. Boyd gave a very fine report of last year's work. The society came up to standard, for which the auxiliary was proud. The meeting was proposed to sell, during the legal hours of sale, at public outcry, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, the following described property, to-wit:
